PIITSBURGH, Sept. 30, 2014 — Carnegie Science Center is hosting a screening of the film Jerusalem followed by an interfaith panel at “Jerusalem and Three Major Religions” on Monday, Oct. 13, from 7 – 9:30 pm.

First, guests will see the awe-inspiring and moving film Jerusalem on the biggest screen in Pittsburgh at Rangos Omnimax Theater. This National Geographic movie, sponsored locally by Baierl Subaru, explores one of the world’s oldest and most enigmatic cities. Jerusalem shows views of the city never photographed before, as it follows three young women – one Jewish, one Christian, and one Muslim – to give glimpses of their cultures.

After the film, an interfaith panel of local experts will talk about what the city means to their religion. Speakers will be:

➤ Dr. Tim Crain

Tim Crain, PhD, is director of the National Catholic Center for Holocaust Education at Seton Hill University, which provides a model for teaching the Holocaust and for building relations with all religious groups. Dr. Crain has a strong educational background in modern Jewish, European, and Middle East history. He has taught at University of Wisconsin-Madison and Marquette University, earning Outstanding Teaching Awards from both.

➤ Karen Hussaini

Karen Hussaini is president of the Syed Farooq Hussaini Islamic Interfaith Network, which is committed to creating understanding and friendship among people of different faiths. Its aim is to work against oppression, injustice, and violence. It also works together with members of other faiths by engaging in dialogue and action to resolve interfaith and intercultural conflicts and undertake measures to avoid exploitation of the weak and defenseless.
Rabbi Amy Levin

Amy Levin is the Rabbi of Beth Shalom in Squirrel Hill. She was the second woman to be ordained by the Schechter Institute of Jewish Studies in Jerusalem, the rabbinic seminary of the Israeli Masorti (Conservative) Movement. Rabbi Levin lived in Jerusalem for 20 years and served Masorti congregations there. She’s served Temple Torat Yisrael in Rhode Island, is a member of the Rabbinical Assembly’s Committee on Jewish Law and Standards, and served as President of the Board of Rabbis of Greater Rhode Island.

Cost for the event is $10 before Oct. 13 at noon or $13 at the door.

The event is presented in partnership with the Jewish Federation of Greater Pittsburgh.

Visit CarnegieScienceCenter.org/Jerusalem for more details and to register.

About Carnegie Science Center

Carnegie Science Center is dedicated to inspiring learning and curiosity by connecting science and technology with everyday life. By making science both relevant and fun, the Science Center’s goal is to increase science literacy in the region and motivate young people to seek careers in science and technology. One of the four Carnegie Museums of Pittsburgh, the Science Center is Pittsburgh’s premier science exploration destination, reaching more than 700,000 people annually through its hands-on exhibits, camps, classes, and off-site education programs.

About Carnegie Museums of Pittsburgh

Founded by Andrew Carnegie in 1895, Carnegie Museums of Pittsburgh is a collection of four distinctive museums dedicated to exploration through art and science: Carnegie Museum of Art, Carnegie Museum of Natural History, Carnegie Science Center, and The Andy Warhol Museum. Annually, the museums reach more than 1.2 million people through exhibitions, educational programs, outreach activities, and special events.

###